

Let's Take A Weekend

© 1973 Mark Hamby

From the Left In The Wake CD

Let's take a weekend, go to the country, lay down our arms and sit quietly
Don't bring your books we'll talk, as soon as we're ready

When we were younger, days ran like water, we couldn't hear each wave break and die
Now they come crashing down, I find myself counting

Still I'd cry away my love, if you should leave with time remaining
Still I'd cry away my love, just like a kid without explaining
'Cause I still want you, I still want you

Let's take a summer, go to the mountains, just like we swore we would years ago
Now that the kids are gone, I think we should keep it

Still I'd cry away my love, if you should leave with time remaining
Still I'd cry away my love, just like a kid without explaining
'Cause I still want you, I still want you of all the ladies

Oh the ladies, how fragile is their spell
They match your looks but not your gaze that holds me captive helplessly
I watch the ladies, oh the ladies, how agile is their step
They match your moves but not your grace that flows around me endlessly

Let's take our fortune, live in the islands, sail up the coast and drift aimlessly
Take in our tired sail, and look at the sunset

Now that we're older, days move like winter, frozen in place but still slipping by
We should be on our way, instead of just waiting

Still I'd cry away my love, if you should leave with time remaining
Still I'd cry away my love, just like a kid without explaining
'Cause I still want you, I still want you of all the ladies